Finger Paintings: Set 2

Of

Vidya Ramanan

Vidya started drawing and sketching from a very young age. She happened to spend lot of time with her grandparents as a child. They recognized her talent and encouraged her, sending her to art schools. Vidya chose 'Art' as her elective not only in school but also in college. She decided on her own without telling anybody! She was very sure that she wanted to be an artist. However for undergraduate degree she chose Psychology and for Masters the choice was Social Work.

She was wise in deciding to follow Art as a serious hobby. She has tried all types of painting and sketching: water color, oil, crayons, pencil and charcoal. Some of her large paintings adorn the homes of her aunts.

In the last year she decided to try computer-aided art. With simple doodle-style movements on her iPad, she can generate very intricate complex patterns of art. She has made about 100 finger paints so far. A selected set of finger paints is attached.
